Christmas Tale

By Shlok Deshpande

Howard Anderson is the wealthiest kid on Maple Avenue. He has neat blonde hair and blueish-gray eyes. He's tall for his age and is mean to other kids at his private school. Howard was spoiled and always got everything he wanted.

On the last day of school before winter break, Howard came inside his mansion, threw his backpack on the floor, and sat down on the couch. On the table in front of the sofa was a paper and a pen that Howard had left out. "Ugh!" said Howard. "Doesn't the butler do anything in this house?!" Howard sighed. "Well," he said, "I might as well write my letter to Santa."

Howard wrote the letter and mailed it. Just as the mailman came and took the note, Howard realized he didn't put a stamp. "Wait!" Howard screamed, "Come back here!!" but the truck didn't stop, Howard got on his electric scooter and chased after the truck. At the truck's next stop, Howard opened the back doors. Howard got in the truck, but just as he did, the rear doors closed.

Howard was about to yell, but a box fell from the top shelf and hit him on the head.

It was a lot colder than he remembered when Howard woke up, and he looked outside and saw 10 feet of snow. Howard was in elf-like clothes. Howard saw many other people in elf clothes, and one lady was standing in the front of the room. She was old and was wearing a Santa dress. Howard suddenly realized where he was. He was at the north pole!

Howard looked around and saw billions of toys everywhere. Howard laughed. The lady, who seemed to be Mrs.Claus, was reading from a gigantic green scroll.

There was another scroll near Howard. It was red, unlike the scroll Mrs. Claus was reading. Howard picked up the red scroll. It was a naughty list!

Howard looked through the list; he scrolled through the list until he saw a name that surprised him. The name was Howard Anderson, and the address next to the name was 1652 Maple Avenue, Seattle, Washington. This was Howard's address. Howard got a sick feeling in his stomach. "I'm on the naughty list?" Howard thought, "Was I that bad this year?"

"Hey!" said an Elf. "What are you doing?"

"Just looking over the naughty list," said Howard. "Oh, and also, I have a letter from Howard Anderson."

The elf looked it over. "Oh," the elf said, "well, we won't need this. He's not getting presents this year."

Howard was about to find a way home when all the toys fell from the shelves; the reindeers went wild, and the elves were buried under the mess. Howard was about to leave when he turned around. He looked around, and he saw all the disruption. Howard thought, “If I can’t get my presents, it doesn't mean the whole world shouldn't.” Howard stayed and helped put the toys back on the shelves and control the reindeers. After that, Howard finally left.

On Christmas morning, Howard was surprised to see presents under the Christmas tree. On top of the gifts, he saw A letter from Santa. In the letter, Santa said, “You staying to help was a selfless enough act to get you onto the nice list. Stay good!”

After Christmas, Howard was the most excellent kid on Maple Avenue.

Christmas Lights

By Pranjal Patil

Hello,

I am Pranjal Pratap Patil. I am in First Grade and I go to Fry Elementary School. I enjoy Reading, Writing and Artwork.

I want to share about how much I like Christmas light shows. Hope you enjoy reading it. Thank you.

Christmas lights are beautiful. I Love them because they are colorful, they have some of my favorite colors red, blue, and green.

Every year I visit different places to explore and see light shows. It's really a visual treat to see colorful lights.

This year, I visited "Festival of Lights" at Phillips Park Zoo, Aurora which is near to my house. It was so colorful, the waving Santa, dancing reindeers & colorful trees I liked the most. I really wonder how they light up so many beautiful shapes and different lights in the park. I even saw a whistling train.

I visited Chicago downtown too and loved the tall buildings with lights. Roads were so bright even at night.

People even light up houses, nearby trees beautifully during Christmas time. Even the roadside trees, Churches, big buildings, shopping malls etc. are decorated as well.
